

Press Release: Center for Domestic Peace Meets Goal of $40,000 Challenge Grant

MARIN COMMUNITY STEPS UP TO SUPPORT CENTER FOR DOMESTIC IN MEETING THE GOAL OF $40,000 CHALLENGE GRANT FROM THE MINER FOUNDATION

With the uncertainty of future funding so many nonprofits currently face, Center for Domestic Peace (C4DP) believes it's important to share the good news about the role of our community in stepping up to support the efforts of C4DP to end domestic violence in Marin and beyond. The Miner Foundation's generous challenge grant presented at C4DP's annual spring luncheon resulted in community donors successfully exceeding the $40,000 match challenge by June 30th. C4DP wishes to thank Justine Miner and The Miner Foundation, as well as C4DP's community of donors.

"Justine Miner and The Miner Foundation are proud of the partnership developed over the years with C4DP," says board member Kelly S. Lawson. "Justine is very passionate about supporting C4DP's efforts and simply helping others. Her generosity and foundation represents her love for her father Robert (Bob) Miner and her honoring of his legacy. "

About Center for Domestic Peace

Center for Domestic Peace (C4DP) was founded in 1977 by a group of visionary women operating under the name Marin Abused Women's Services (MAWS). Since then, it has grown to be recognized as a national leader, innovating and creating several first in the nation programs. C4DP has helped over 210,000 women, children, and men to end the violence and to achieve safe, productive lives. 2017 marks 40 years of C4DP's commitment and dedication to ending domestic violence and transforming lives.
